Six ways to develop and keep your own bible reading habit

Make it a priority: “Man shall not live on bread alone, but on every word that comes from the mouth of God” (Matthew 4:4). Just as we get wearied and feel unwell if we don’t eat, we will struggle spiritually if we’re not feeding our souls with the Bible.

Choose a time and place: “When you pray, go into your room, close the door and pray to your Father, who is unseen” (Matthew 5:6). Our time with God is just that: quality time when we can be alone with Him to reflect on His Word. Where might your special, secret place with God be?

Share the journey: “[Speak] to one another with psalms, hymns and songs from the Spirit” (Ephesians 5:19). A great way to get into Bible reading is to do it with someone else. Who could help you develop this habit?

Have a guide: We can really benefit from teachers and study guides; they will help us understand the various cultures and contexts in God’s Word, so we can get the most out of it.

Meditate on it: “Blessed is the one . . . who meditates on his law day and night” (Psalm 1:1-2). Creating a Bible reading habit is more than just reading; it’s about learning to take what you read with you through your day so you can meditate (or ‘chew it over’ in your mind). This is where God often reveals the hidden truths of what we have read.

Don’t give up: Our relationship with God isn’t dependent on getting everything right; He knows we won’t. But let’s ask Jesus to help us love and value His Word. Knowing God through it is incredibly exciting and rewarding. We’ll never regret the hard work involved in making it a bigger part of our lives!
