Holding onto Hope

As we recall the countless times God has come through for us and for others in the past, we can trust that our hope is secured in Him no matter how downcast we feel in the moment.

What do you do when you are feeling low? Do you feel guilty and try to carry on like everything is fine? Listen to these words from Charles Spurgeon, a 19th century preacher who suffered with bouts of depression throughout his ministry:

“Jesus Christ our Lord once said, ‘My soul is exceedingly sorrowful, even to death.’ There was no sin in Him, and consequently none in His deep depression.”

Struggling with our mental wellbeing is not proof that we've got something wrong. We haven't failed because we feel lost in gloom. We're simply struggling with a world that is no longer whole- and that is completely normal.

The Bible never rebukes us for wanting to hide away when we feel low; but it does teach us to hide in the right place. The psalmist writes: “You are my hiding place; you will protect me from trouble and surround me with songs of deliverance” (Psalm 32:7) Jesus knows what it is to suffer sorrow and pain in this world. He is the One who can carry our burdens, walk the road beside us and fill our hearts with hope.

Perhaps life might have taught us to be wary of hope. When hopes are dashed, it is far more crushing than if we had ever hoped at all. Biblical hope is not a wish; it is a certainty that we cannot yet see. Ultimately, it is Jesus Himself. He will never let us down.

Paul writes, “I press on to take hold of that for which Christ Jesus took hold of me” (Phil 3:12) Jesus – our hope- has taken hold of us, never to let go. Each day we can strive to cling to Him, growing in confidence that just as He has given Himself for us on the cross, so will He continue to love and care for us.
