SERVING FOR GOD'S SAKE

When England's Queen Elizabeth passed away in September 2022, thousands of soldiers were deployed to march in the funeral procession. Their individual roles must have been almost unnoticeable in the large crowd, but many saw it as the greatest honour. One soldier said it was "an opportunity to do our last duty for Her Majesty". For him, it was not what he did, but whom he was doing it for that made it an important job.

The Levites assigned to take care of the tabernacle furnishings had a similar aim. Unlike the priests, the Gershonites, Kohathites and Merarites were assigned seemingly mundane tasks: cleaning the furniture, lamp stands, curtains, posts, tent pegs and ropes. Yet their jobs were specifically assigned by God, constituted "doing the work of the tabernacle" and are recorded in the Bible for posterity.

What an encouraging thought! Today, what many of us do at work, at home or in church may seem insignificant to a world that values titles and salaries. But God sees it differently. If we work and serve for His sake – seeking excellence and doing so for His honour, even in the smallest task – then our work is important because we're serving our great God.

How might knowing that you're ultimately serving God change the way you work?

How can you do it with pride and excellence for His sake?

As we commence a new term in church activities think about how you can serve Him in your church here in Magheramorne. We are blessed to have a great team of willing leaders and helpers but there are opportunities for you to use your talents and to be faithful in serving God.
